

SOLLA FABIANA

Mothers after cancer: actuality and perspectives.

ABSTRACT

The diagnosis of cancer and the treatments related to it are frequently associated with a reduction of fertility. To discuss the issue with assisted people is essential to respect the women's views in relation to fertility preservation and consistent care plan interventions.

The recommendations in the scientific literature support an involvement of women with cancer as early as possible, the discussion of the value attributed to the possibility / choices on reproduction, emotional / psychological support, the involvement of professionals of sexual and reproductive health.